Of England they to Canterbury wend, The holy blessed martyr there to seek . Who helped them when they lay so ill and weak. Befell that, in that season, on a day . In Southwark, at the Tabard, as I lay . Ready to start upon my pilgrimage . To Canterbury, full of devout homage, There came at nightfall to that hostelry

The General Prologue - Translation

The General Prologue was probably written early in the composition of the Canterbury Tales, and offers an interesting comparison point to many of the individual tales itself. Of course, it does not match up to the tales as we have them in a number of ways: the Nun's Priest and the Second Nun are not described, and, most significantly, the work as we have it does not reflect the Host's plan.
